Mike Maccagnan, who is in his first season with the Philadelphia Eagles, was hired as a personnel executive during the 2026 offseason. A scouting veteran with more than 25 years of NFL experience, Maccagnan joins the team after serving as general manager of the New York Jets from 2015-19.

Throughout his tenure with New York, Maccagnan oversaw a roster that featured nine players who earned Pro Bowl accolades during that span. He served as director of college scouting (2011-14), assistant director of college scouting (2010) and coordinator of college scouting (2000-09), where he played an integral role in the construction of the first-ever Texans roster in 2002. Prior to Houston, Maccagnan spent time in the Canadian Football League (CFL), including serving as director of scouting for the Saskatchewan Roughriders in 1994 and scouting director of player personnel for the Ottawa Rough Riders in 1993.

From 1990-91, Maccagnan worked within the World League of American Football as director of player personnel for the London Monarchs (1991) and as a league scout for the WLAF league office (1990). With the Monarchs, he contributed to a scouting department that helped capture the 1991 World Bowl with a shut-out win over the Barcelona Dragons

Maccagnan originally began his NFL career in 1990 as a scouting intern for the Washington Redskins assisting with training camp scouting operations.
